-Pleasants Caunty Oracle. Mr. JEFFERSON, after serving his country two terms, left the White House no wealth ier than when he entered, but on the con trary poor. Your "progressive" statesmen o to day leave the service of their country, no voluntarily as did the great Jefferson, re-fusing a third term.—Clarkburg News. And yet Alex H. Stevens, the Demo cratic Governor of Georgia, is authority for mont county, Ohio, the deserved compliment of transferring his communication to this paper on the Milk and Butter ment of transferring his communication for this paper on the Milk and Butter business to its columns in last week. Mr.

McKelvy is one of the most intelligent. This kind of argument will not do, for it McKelvy is one of the most intelligent and successful farmers Eastern Ohio, and successful farmers Eastern Ohio, and writes instructively on all matters that the takes up for discussion connected with of the few should be guarded against the

The News-Letter announces upon authority that President John Jarrett, of the Investigation of gurd to the charges preferred by Mechanics Lodge of Pittsburgh, has been fully and completely exhonerated, and his course during the strike endorsed in every particular. We are glad to record this, not only for the sake of President Jarrett, but as a matter affecting the interests of the asso-ciation. Judicial intelligence and tolera-tion are two indispensable elements in the successful supervision of a body of that character. Mr. Jarrett's position is one character. Mr. Jarrett's position is one that ealls for intelligence not only on his own part but on the part of those in autho rity to whom he is responsible. Without this his hands would be tied indeed, and the usefulness and even the existence of the association made practically impossible. It will be found in the future that as intelligence and not impulsiveners governs in all decisions arrived at, in that proportion will the usefulness and power of this great labor organization be effective. "Thrice is he armed," said Shakespeare, "who hath his quarrel just," and this is true not only of individuals bu of associations, and we cannot see how, as a defensive organization, the Amalgamated Association can be made stronger than by the subordination of all questions of difference to which it is a party to a high cour of arbitrament within its own ranks, composed of persons selected with careful refer-ence to their undoubted character and in-We have never known what was the exact character of the charges preferred neginst Mr. Jarrett, but have understoo that one was the charge that he held a secre meeting with certain manufacturers in Cincinnatiand that they were seen cominout of his room at a late hour in the night. or rather at an early hour in the morning We can understand how Mr. Jarrett might hold such [a meeting and be entirely guileless and blameless, for the sake of hearing and discussing uninterruptedly and exhausticely all the paints at icena ertheless, a man in his position should be like any man in high position and author ity, so guarded by himself and others as to be above the possibility of misconstruction and suspicion. Tennyson in his tribut to Prince Albert, the late Prince Consort of Great Britain, spoke of the "fierce whi light that beats against the throne," search ing for so much as a speck or flaw, and i was the fact that Prince Albert in all hi interviews with the ladies of the Court of foreign visitors of distinction always ha an attendant to remain just outside th partially opened door that preserved hi name during life absolutely free from an association with scandal, and thus gave his his weight of personal influence amon a people naturally jealous of a foreig prince. And so a man in Mr. Jarrett peculiar position has need to be careful how and under what circumstances he meets those with whom he is at issue in his representative character, so that his good name will not be jeopardized. The "fierce, white light" of many furnace fires beats against his position, and is not less searchingly than that to which Tennyson alluded, and no man can escape embarrassment who does not look narrowly to his footsteps.

Steam on the Elm Grove Stailroad.

On Saturday evening I attended the meeting of a number of the citizens before the special committee appointed by the season of the year, and have to be soid at a great sacrifice.

the special committee appointed by the City Council to consider an ordinance proposed to grant the Eim Grove railroad, now reaching Hornbrook's Park, run by horse power, the right to use steam, to run their cars to the market house, between Tenth and Eleventh streets.

The company asks this privilege, because it is found by actual experience of operating the cars by horse power that it is a losing business, and unless the company can obtain this grant, it will have to close up the road entirely. This is caused mainly by the fact that during about seven months in the year very little business is done, but that during the summer and early fall the business requires a great number of horses, which cannot be used in the other season of the year, and have to be sold at a great sacrifice.

This is the real merit of the case, and it would operate very hard upon a great many citazens of Wheeling, and especially upon the town of Fulton, if this road should be discontinued.

It was urged by those opposed to this measure, that the experiment had been tried in Roston, Kew York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington city, and been abandoned, and that the street railroads only extended to the city by steam. The persons urging this objection were not, perhaps, able to assign the reason why those ran make no difference what the quasis for that measure might be, for it is the resist we must look to for our guidance. We must now consider that if steam furnishes cheaper transportation than horse power, then this road would bring into town all kinds of freight, including stone, coal, and indeed every kind of freight. And the Citizens railway company would derive the same privilege, and in fact have as good right to it as the Elm Grove railway, nor could the councils refuse that or any other company the same privilege, and the great business of the fown would be done by steam. Are we prepared for such a state of affairs?

I know that this road is a great accommodation to the people along the line, and contains the proper of the line, and CHALLENGE.

FOR SALE. BANK OF THE OHIO VALLEY.

I know that this road is a great accommodation to the people along the line, and especially to the people of Fulton who attend the market, but the steam cars could stop at Fulton and the horse cars could run on market mornings and make extra trips to accommodate the market people. It is said that the cars will be dimmics and make no noise and very little smoke. It is impossible that they can be run without heat, and fire will make smoke, and it cannot be avoided.

It is now proposed that this city shall make another experiment of the steam system, already exploded in other cities, liesides it is almost beyond a doubt that the City Council have no power to make cash dividend of three per cent, payable Tuesday, November 14, 1882.
